

photos by Terri Hamilton

“Who isn’t moved by the way trees encapsulate and memorialize time? Humans merely get older, shedding cellular bits of ourselves as we age. Things would be very different if we absorbed time the way trees do, with such structural integrity, such an uncanny ability to preserve the year that’s just escaped but also to fold it away out of sight.”

f t in
www.ericrains.com

erla eric rains landscape architecture, llc